

“A Day to be Remembered”

Today I realized just how much my country means to me
Like most of us who sit in disbelief at the horror that befell us
We cannot feel but anger at those who would commit such an atrocity
And want to destroy the evil ones who would do this to us

Knowing though that to do so would liken us to them all
Has little to do with it in my book for they are worth are anger
For they hurt and killed many, this cannot be forgiven at all
On September 11th 2001, a day to be remembered forever

We hope that justice will prevail and conquer those who did this
But know that if we do not persist, that justice will fall short
Until another fateful day comes making it harder to dismiss
And on a day to be remembered, harder to have our day in court

So what shall we do, but be saddened by what has happened
And pray to God that we will conquer evil in its many faces
And that we know we will for many days to come, be saddened
Of what occurred on a day to be remembered in so many places
